Portuguese electric illumination was inaugurated here in 1878.

*Electric experience in
"Storylovers"*

"It was Prince Carlos' 15th birthday, and the opening of electric illumination was set for that date.

The King ordered six lamps for the esplanade of Cidadela, and for the first time, the country saw electric light."

King Carlos in "Storylovers"

"If the walls could tell their secrets, they would now tell you about a king. He was an early riser, and while the rest of the world was still asleep, he would get up and run off to photograph the sea."

He would leave by car, either there was rain or shine, and wanted to stay around. King Carlos lived here."

ART DISTRICT

The Ciudadela Art District will be a disruption in the population's daily routine that intends to offer contemporary art through the appropriation of non-sites and means associated with mass communication, promoting artistic development as a facilitator for artists and galleries.

There is a doubly subversive character in this Art District, in on one hand it brings contemporary art into everyday life's context; on the other, by using non-sites or transitional spaces, affirms an exceptional character of true decontextualisation: former military barracks transformed in Studios for artistic residencies where the in loco creation is a constant dynamic, public spaces of the Hotel transformed in exhibition areas, pop-up exhibitions and site-specific collaborations with national or international guest artists also happen at the hotel common spaces along the year and some Hotel Rooms are now Author Rooms after being intervened by the artists. All this enables the exhibition of contemporary art outside of its traditional grounds as well as promoting the usage of new sites never connected with museological purposes before.

It was in Cascais that the Duke of Alba landed to take possession of Portugal for King Phillip II.

OUT

Cascais is the ideal place for all those who wish to stay close to Lisbon but far from the stress of the capital. The Village that once was a fishing village is nowadays one of Portugal's wealthiest cities. Gained fame when the Royal Family began to spend their holidays there, at the end of the 19th century. The tradition remains, and Cascais continues to be a destination for all those seeking a beach or wanting to practice one of the multiple water sports available on the coast, or to play golf or tennis, attend a motor sport event, visit the casino or simply relax. And as you might expect from a village close to the sea, the local cuisine reinforces its offer with fish and seafood meals that are a delight for all visitors.

TO DO

In a place that breathes the breeze of the sea every day, water sports could be the main attractions for those visiting Cascais. But what you can do in this town goes far beyond the Ocean. Starting at the Casino Estoril, Europe's largest and oldest in Portugal, but always faithful to vanguardism and service excellence.
