Champagne

Champagne is a light sparkling wine which is made only in the Champagne region of northeastern France. It is different from all other sparkling wines in the world for three major reasons: First, a wine can only be labeled as "champagne" if it is made in the Champagne region of France. Second, to be called "champagne," it must be made only from the Pinot Noir, Pinot Meunier, or Chardonnay grapes which grow in that region. And third, true champagne, as opposed to other sparkling wines has to have gotten its bubbles by undergoing the fermentation process twice: once in barrels and again in bottles.

PIEMONTE

Barbera was born in the northern Italian region of Piedmont, the same region famous for the Nebbiolo grape and the coveted Barolo and Barbaresco wines that grape produces. Many from this region refer to Barbera as "the people's wine" because unlike Nebbiolo, which even when it's not being used in Barolo and Barbaresco is still only saved for special occasions, Barbera is an every-day affordable stunner. The wine, while very dark in color, is actually quite light in taste. Barbera has flavors of cherries, strawberries and raspberries, and when young can have intense aromas of blackberries as well.

2016	Ricossa Antica Casa , Barbera d'Asti, Piemonte	49.00
------	---	-------

Nebbiolo ("Nebby-oh-low") is a full-bodied red wine more famously known by the two production regions of Barolo and Barbaresco in Piedmont, tasting Nebbiolo wines floral and light red fruit aromas suggest the wine is much lighter than it is. Upon tasting Nebbiolo you will experience leathery, gripping high tannin. Despite its tannic structure, the wine's fruity flavors of cherry and raspberries, supported with aromas of rose and anise, Nebbiolo gets a bit herbaceous with more sour cranberry fruit, rose hip and leather and red clay minerality.

ARGENTINA

Malbec is a blending grape in Bordeaux's top 5 wine grapes. Because of the grapes' poor resistance to weather and pests, it found a new home in Mendoza, Argentina where a nostalgic French botanist planted it by order of the mayor in 1868. The main fruit flavors of Argentine Malbec are blackberry, plum, and black cherry. The nuanced flavors offer milk chocolate, cocoa powder, violet flowers, and leather, depending on oak aging, a sweet tobacco finish.
