

An aerial photograph of a tropical coastline. The ocean is a vibrant blue, transitioning to a lighter turquoise near the shore. A rocky peninsula is covered in lush green vegetation, including palm trees. Several modern, white, single-story houses with large windows and balconies are built on the peninsula. The sky is bright blue with scattered white clouds.

"Truly prepossessing was our first view of Zanzibar....The sea of purest sapphire...under a blaze of sunshine which touched every object with a dull burnish of gold."

Shade of Blu

in the Ocean

Our name, SafiraBlu, celebrates the sapphire waters of the Indian Ocean, where one shade of blue blends seamlessly into countless others.

It is this connectedness we want to share with you: the connection between soul and sea, of one to many, and of self to nature.

The Spice Island

Zanzibar, known locally as The Spice Island, is a fascinating mix of peoples, cultures, cuisines and architecture. While it was once a Sultanate of Oman, today it is a tropical paradise filled with swaying palms and endless miles of sandy beaches. Land in Stone Town, a UNESCO World Heritage site and Zanzibar's capital, and immerse yourself in alley-ways untouched by time; surf, snorkel, and fish in turquoise waters, sample local cuisine and the freshest seafood, and learn about the people and tribes of East Africa.

Our Slice of Paradise

Situated on the Northeast Coast of Zanzibar, SafiraBlu is surrounded by untouched land and is secluded and away from the busy tourist attractions of the island. Local fishermen still dot the coastline with their dhows during the day, and with no light pollution, there is nothing between you and the starry skies at night.
